Healthscope and Australian Health Service Alliance reach in principle agreement to avoid extra fees for fund members

Healthscope and the Australian Health Service Alliance (AHSA) have reached an in principle agreement ensuring AHSA members will continue to be covered at Healthscope's hospitals.

Healthscope CEO Greg Horan said the two parties have agreed in principle economic terms and will work together in the coming weeks to resolve remaining points and finalise a new contract.

"This in principle agreement means we can continue to care for AHSA members at all our hospitals without the need for additional fees. We are cautiously optimistic that we can resolve the remaining terms and finalise this agreement in short order, to avoid any future disruption for our patients," Mr Horan said.
